Governor Browning Abandons Plan to Use National Guardsmen in Thursday's Election Battle With Crump Machine

NASHVILLE, Tenn., (AP)—The prospect of troop patrols for the voting booths in Memphis in Thursday's Democratic primary was removed Tuesday.

Wildest Campaign in Years for 'Hog and Hominy' State Nears Close

BREAK UP ALLIANCE

Browning, Once His Ally, Now Fears Crump, Boss of Memphis

By NEA Service
MEMPHIS, Tenn.—A rough-house campaign that has brought charges of "rotten politics" before a Senate committee, and which may even bring National Guardsmen to Memphis to supervise the primary election August 4, is roaring across the "hog-and-hominy" state.

Gov. Gordon Browning, who spent

Gov. Gordon Browning, styled "Tennessee Hitler" by his opponents, has waged a war for reelection which has many reminiscences of Huey Long's campaigns in Louisiana, including the use of Huey's tactic in his aggressive primary campaign.

The last 15 minutes of the World war in a pillbox under a devastating artillery barrage, is probably right at home in the current campaign. For the primary fight is a knock-down and drag-out affair between the state machine built up by Browning while his opponents cried "Tennessee Hitler," and the long-contending Crump machine in Memphis, which claims support of federal patronage.

Browning is running for reelection as governor, while Crump's candidate

Ed H. Crump, soft-spoken "boss" of Memphis, Tenn., is famed for his ability to "deliver" Shelby county's 60,000 or more votes in any election. He plans to "deliver" them this year to Wendell Cooper, his candidate opposing Governor Browning in the hottest primary fight Tennessee has seen in many years.

is State Senator Wendell Cooper. Browning is backing U. S. Senator George L. Berry, millionaire head of the Pressman's Union, for reelection, and the Crump machine is opposing him with Tom Stewart. It is National Guard headquarters ordered guardsmen being held in Tennessee for possible assignment to Memphis to proceed as soon as possible to training maneuvers in south Mississippi.

Adjutant General R. O. Smith held about 600 guardsmen and officers at Jackson and Nashville awaiting Governor Browning's decision whether to send them to Memphis, anti-Browning stronghold.

Browning in Memphis

Gov. Gordon Browning invaded Memphis with his sound truck Monday night for a campaign address a few hours after his opponents had obtained a federal injunction to prevent him from moving troops here for Thursday's voting and directing United States marshals to assemble sufficient force "to resist an invasion" by militia.

The governor, who declared Sunday night that he would not use troops at Memphis "unless I change my mind," drove into town for an attack on E. H. Crump, Memphis political leader, as his loud speaker blared out, "I'm looking for the bully of the town."

Browning told a cheering crowd of thousands that whatever he might have decided about troops would "have no relation to any injunction."

"The idea of letting a federal injunction deter me from handling the state's troops is silly and absurd," he added, "I am chief executive of a sovereign state and know exactly what my rights are."

The governor ridiculed Shelby county attorneys for seeking an injunction with no troops in Memphis, declaring they were "trying to sew up a place before it was ripped."

Judge Martin Bitter

In a withering attack on Governor Browning, Federal Judge John D. Martin had issued an order restraining the governor from entering Memphis with troops and preventing the pro-Browning county Election Commission from refusing the right to vote to persons having certificates of registration from the regular biennial registration last August.

Told by the petitioners that Governor Browning has said a federal injunction could not prevent movement of troops into Memphis if he decided to issue it, Judge Martin declared from the bench:

"When the governor of the state threatens the violation of orders of the United States court, then it is full time for the United States court to act to restrain the acts of a tyrannical despot."

Kenneth McWilliams, 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Earle McWilliams of the Shover Springs community, died at his home at 8:40 p. m. Monday of pneumococcus meningitis (not the contagious type).

He had been ill several days and following his death fear spread through the Shover community that he had died of the contagious type of meningitis.

Dr. J. W. Branch, family physician, spiked this report with the announcement that the youth had died of pneumococcus meningitis upon receiving a report from a Little Rock laboratory where the case had been under study.

Funeral services were announced for 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon from the Shover Springs church with the Rev. Eugene Moore of Benton, officiating.

Surviving besides his parents are two sisters, Elmer and Marjorie, and one brother, Glendon.

Candidates Talk at Ozan; Speak at Bingen on Tuesday

LEGISLATIVE ISSUE

Royce Weisenberger Discusses His Candidacy Before Ozan Crowd

By J. T. BOWDEN, Jr.

Electors of Ozan and Mine Creek townships crowded the auditorium of the Ozan school Monday to hear 25 speeches made by candidates running for township, county and district offices. Two state candidates, R. A. Cook for governor and Lester Booker for state land commissioner, were represented by proxy. Shirley Robins served as chairman of the meeting.

Candidates for road overseer of Ozan township received the first call of the day. Joe Fincher, with a few well chosen words, was first to make an announcement. Lanny Beck, Fincher's only opponent, was next and made a short announcement regarding his candidacy.

Three candidates for road overseer of Mine Creek Township spoke briefly. They were: Walter Harper, Kelsie Crompton and John Lewis.

Aspirants to the office of sheriff were next on the program. Speaking first was Clarence Baker. He was followed by John Griffin and Reginald Beardon.

State Senate entrants, James Pilkington and W. F. Rengan, were next to present their claims.

Eenskers for the office of tax assessor made short announcements. C. Cook: "I am no speech maker, besides this is no speech-making job. It is a business office. . . . I know land values and all taxes shall be assessed alike if I am elected on August 9."

Dewey Hendrix: "I am thankful to you people for the nice vote you gave me four years ago. Having served as deputy the past three and one-half years, I know the duties of the office and if elected shall handle them with full regard to every citizen."

The County Clerks

Frank Hill was first of the county clerk entrants to speak. He said in part: "I have been connected with the county agent's office for four years. I am making this race on my own merits. . . . I believe that I am qualified."

Andrew Hutson said: "I am no stranger to most of you folks. . . . I know the duties and know I am qualified. . . . It has been my ambition since a lad to hold this office. . . . I ask anyone in Hope about 'Speedy' Hutson."

Gifford Byers: "My school teaching record of 20 years speaks for itself. However you owe me nothing for helping guide your children in the right way. . . . I ask only for your vote if you think me capable to hold the office."

The Representatives

J. A. Sullivan, for representative, was the first man to speak at the afternoon session. He was followed by John P. Vesey. It was necessary for George Brown to leave Ozan before his time to speak. Hugh Clark, an opponent, said a few words in Mr. Brown's behalf.

Royce Weisenberger, in making his speech for one of the representative posts, said in part:

"The man to represent you in the legislature must be one of honor and integrity, of good moral record, of courage and conviction. . . . He must fight for your rights on the floor of the house, and did you ever see a red-headed country boy who didn't love a good fight? To properly serve you this man must have experienced your own problems. I am that young man."

"Your representative must be familiar with the principles of government," He cited his part in helping to write a book on government now used in the state high schools, and his being a practicing attorney in Hope.

"I have challenged my opponents day after day, and again today through that same challenge: That they show you they are better qualified than Royce Weisenberger. . . . I shall attend all the meeting. . . . I shall serve all the people."

"The other day I was asked on the streets of Hope how I stood on the auto testing law. After I told the man that I was against the law he said that I had lost a vote. I replied that all of the candidates for representative advocated repeal of the measure. 'No,' he said, 'there are two who are not for its repeal.' Someone in this race must be trying to play two sides."

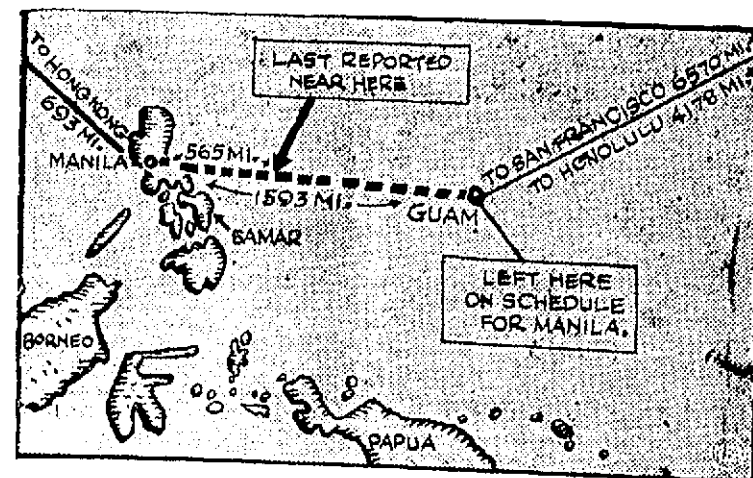

"Local Roads First"

Weisenberger stated that in regard to the road question he favored that the money available be spent first on school bus, mail and milk routes. He favors taking nothing away from the

Pioneer Clipper Feared Lost in Pacific

The huge trans-Pacific flying boat, the Hawaii Clipper, above, long overdue in Manila on a 1593-mile hop from the island of Guam, was the object of a widespread search led by the U. S. Army transport Meigs. The clipper, which inaugurated regular commercial service across the Pacific in 1936, was capable of landing on a heavy sea. She carried six passengers and a crew of nine.

This map shows the position from which the Pan American Airways ship, Hawaii Clipper, radiated its last report to Manila. At the time the message was sent the clipper was 565 miles from the Philippine coast on the 1593-mile westward flight from Guam. It had left San Francisco Saturday, July 23, flying to Hawaii, then to Guam. With the big ship long overdue, the U. S. Army transport Meigs was dispatched from Manila to the last reported position, latitude 12°27' north, longitude 140°30' east of Samar, easternmost island of the Philippine group.

Delight Youth Is Fatally Injured

He was brought to the hospital here in an unconscious condition and died without regaining consciousness.

Little could be learned here of his relatives, except that his father's name was reported to be Virgil Garner of near Delight. The body was taken to the Murray funeral home at Arkadelphia to await funeral arrangements.

Young Garner was reported to be driving alone in an open car when the tree fell on him. Whether he was caught in a windstorm could not be learned.

There has been scattered thunder showers over south Arkansas for the past several days with some wind in spotted areas.

Radio and Telegraph Mustered for Service in Philippines

MANILA, P. I.—(AP)—In the faint hope that the Hawaii Clipper had reached land with the 15 men she carried when she disappeared last week, all telegraph and radio stations on the Pacific coast side of the eight Philippine islands were brought into the hunt for clues Tuesday.

The Philippine Postoffice Department, which controls island telegraph and radio service, instructed the stations to "exert the utmost efforts to secure from reliable persons the identity of any plane that may have flown over the locality July 29. Wire us immediately."

The stations also were instructed to contact persons in wild and remote areas along the islands. These areas have been carefully searched by army and navy planes.

Even Break Likely for F. D. Tuesday

Concede Victory for Clark in Missouri, Wish McGil in Kansas

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Roosevelt administration hoped Tuesday to balance the expected renomination of Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri with an overwhelming primary victory for Senator George McGil in Kansas.

These were the only two Democratic senatorial contests in Kansas, Missouri, West Virginia and Virginia state-wide elections which provided out-and-out tests of the president's policies.

Clark opposed the court bill and various other White House measures, but administration advisors took for granted his defeat of two New Deal supporters because he had the backing of both Democratic factions in his state.

A Little Totalitarian Tale of Efficiency

THE big brag of the totalitarian state is that it is efficient. It may be a bit repressive and hard to live with, but it Gets Things Done: slipshod old Democracy just muddles along, falling over its own feet and fanning itself to death with the breeze of its waste motions.

Okay. Let's look, as they say, at the record. Until recently the New York Times maintained its central European bureau in Vienna. The Anschluss made it necessary for the bureau to be moved to Prague. The bureau consisted of four small rooms; the stuff to be moved included a small amount of furniture, a few typewriters, and some files. The Times people blithely notified the authorities, called the movers, and prepared to get going.

At this point German efficiency stepped in—with the result that it took two mortal months to jet one vanload of possessions moved from Vienna to Prague.

INSPECTORS of high and low degree came to call. Innumerable documents had to be filled out, books had to be examined, appeals taken, signatures of various functionaries obtained. All of this took three weeks.

Then the efficient Teutons had to go over all of the things that were to be moved—and go over them they did, with a super-efficient fine-comb. Every file that was being taken out had to be opened and examined thoroughly. Every book was opened and examined, page by page, to make sure that no banknotes or other contraband were being taken out of the country.

The inspectors had their most fun with 120 bound volumes of the Times. These had to get a close scrutiny, like everything else; and if you have ever seen a bound volume of a daily paper, you can imagine how long it took to go through those 120 volumes.

By the time all this was done, the tax permits previously obtained had expired. These had to be renewed, which meant more delay. Then the movers had to be rounded up. The loaded van had to be sealed; loaded, it had to proceed at a snail's pace, while six inspectors walked alongside, like pallbearers, to make sure that no one added to or subtracted from the precious load.

SO, what with one thing and another, the Times people got moved—in two months.

All very efficient, certainly; but efficient for what? Efficient in the sense that German officialdom knows, to the last paper clip, exactly what the Times people took out of Vienna; staggeringly, unbelievably inefficient and bungle-some from every other viewpoint.

It's less of a strain on the nerves to muddle through with slipshod old Miss Democracy—don't you think?

Life Is Always Beginning

IT used to be that when somebody came out with a prediction that when somebody came out with a prediction that the average man would live to greater and greater ages as time went on you'd hear the comment: "There wouldn't be anything to do!"

You don't hear that so much any more. This may be the age of youth, but new vistas of enjoyment and achievement for the older man and woman have been coming in sight, and it looks as if they're going to keep right on multiplying.

Science, medicine, the material benefits of civilization have made the last decades of a man's life more attractive on the physical plane, but quite as important has been the discovery that no real basis actually exists for the elderly person's assumption that the adventures of the mind belong only to the young.

New evidence that gives the lie to such an assumption is disclosed in a nation-wide study of several thousand university extension students, young and old. The findings of the study make it plain that the average man's mental powers decline very little with age, that he often proves to be a more brilliant student than his younger classmate, and that the only obstacle to an old age filled with intellectual adventure may be ignorance of one's own capacities.

Today belongs to youth, but it belongs to age, too.

Amount of Green in Many Vegetables Is Clew to Vitamin A Content

Vitamin A has already been mentioned frequently in these columns as one of the most necessary substances in the human diet. It has also been pointed out frequently that few people realize that extra vitamin A because this vitamin is widely distributed in many common food substances.

In foods of plant origin there seems to be a direct parallel between the amount of greenness in the plant and the amount of vitamin A.

The plants with thin green leaves are among the best sources of vitamin A. Thus it is reported that the outer green leaves of iceberg lettuce, which are usually removed before the head lettuce is offered to the consumer, have been shown to be from 30 to 40 times as rich in vitamin A as the inner, bleached leaves which make up the head lettuce. Moreover, the outer green leaves of a head of young cabbage are also reported to be of a much higher vitamin A content than the inner white leaves.

Other green vegetables which contain large amounts of vitamin A are the green seeds and seed foods, such as peas and green snap peas, green peppers, asparagus, broccoli stocks, and green celery.

Other foods which are rich in vitamin A are those which have a notable yellow color. This yellow color is derived from carotene, which is the substance out of which the body makes vitamin A. The best known examples of such substances are carrots and sweet potatoes. Furthermore, such fruits as apricots, yellow peaches and bananas are also rich in vitamin A.

Studies of vitamin A content indicate that when there is a yellow and white variety of any given fruit or vegetable, the yellow variety invariably has a higher content of vitamin A than the white variety. Yellow peaches and tomatoes are of a high vitamin A content, whereas the corresponding white varieties are merely fair in their content of vitamin A.

However, a yellow watermelon is not an infallible guide to vitamin A content, because there are other plant pigments which are yellow beside carotene.

Dr. Hazel E. Munsell points out that a red color is also mentioned sometimes as a guide to vitamin A content.

Toy Is Pill to Allay "Unimportance" Plan.

(No. 158)

As many of our children are sensitive, meaning that they are too self-conscious and therefore inferiority-ridden (for the self-conscious never have much faith in themselves), we have to home some pills handy to take the edge off their pain.

These "pills" often consist (let us be honest) of material things. What else is there to keep up with the Jones but attempting to smother inferiority?

Now I don't mean that the child with no faith in himself should be over-loaded with toys and possessions. This is a fallacy, indeed, for toys lose their thrill. Besides, children can learn to depend upon belongings altogether. But in spite of all this, the pride of ownership is so closely allied with self-respect that it cannot be overlooked.

I should see that my "inferior" child,

A Southern Editor Eyes the South

Never was there a more inveterate southern than Editor Jonathan Daniels of Raleigh, N.C. And rarely has there been a book so searchingly exhaustive on the country below the Mason line as his vital story, "A Southerner Discovers the South" (Macmillan, $3).

Mr. Daniels has spent most of his busy young life in the south, except for a few years of newspapering in New York, Paris, Trier, and Florence. So he looks upon it with both an expert eye and with detachment. But even his observation wasn't enough for Editor Daniels.

So a few months ago he climbed into his automobile and set out to see feeling as he does about his unimportance, had a goodly average of things to do and things to play with. Not more than his neighbors, but a fair percentage of what his playmates have, just so he won't feel overlooked.

It doesn't happen that money grows on trees, that's sure, yet the psychology is there, just the same. A new hat gives a woman assurance. A new set of a man up. A new anything gives a serious but comforting fillip to declining pride and helps personality send forth new and braver shoots.

This child should also, of course, be kept clean, be able to bring his friends into a decently-ordered house, and show other children that he is important to his parents.

But back to possessions. Tommy next door has just been given a new bicycle. There is no money to buy our Roger a wheel, but Roger can hold his own and keep his self-respect by a little thought and resourcefulness on our part.

Roger has been wanting a rabbit hutch. Here is something more reasonable. Or maybe he wants pigeons or bees. The neighborhood is more interested in the birds or rabbits, than in a dozen wheels. So, our boy is vindicated in his own eyes, because he has become important to the boys.

We could, I suppose, utter a generality and say that materialism is unrelated to inferiority. If this is always true, then why do grown-ups strive so hard to buy clothes, adorn their bodies, refurbish their houses and fuss about cars? All the things, in short, that satisfy the heart? Children are adults as far as emotions go. They need a certain amount of artificial bolstering to keep even with their world.

To provide possessions is not a cure for real inferiority. It is merely comfort, or, as I have said, "pills," to help the pain. Yet ambition is usually materialistic in its goals. We must be practical.

Ann Sheridan Gets Her Umph Rewarded Despite Her Good Nature

Ann Sheridan has a good nature and what it takes to wear a bathing suit the right way. She suspects that maybe if she had had less of both she might have had her dramatic "umph" recognized faster. In the picture above, Miss Sheridan displays the dramatic umph on the right she displays Miss Sheridan.

HOLLYWOOD.—Red-headed and streamlined Ann Sheridan, who takes the best bathing suit picture in town, is beginning to suspect that she's too good-natured.

It has taken her a long time to reach this decision, and it is doubtful, now, that she will change her ways. But she feels that if she had tossed a tantrum occasionally, she might be a star today. A star instead of a leading woman on her way to stardom. She has spent five miserable years convincing producers that she is more than a cutie-stooge in mysteries and westerns, and that she has, in ample quantity, the quality known as "umph."

This "umph" business is attested by the attitude of both press agents and press, who long have wondered what was retarding Miss Sheridan's progress. Fact is, though, that the publicity men themselves have been a drag on her career because, whenever somebody wanted a gag picture, the press agents usually trotted out Ann Sheridan.

She has posed on skyrocket, prop divers, screwy aquatic vehicles, high diving boards, and with incredible fauna from the sea. All this, of course, in a bathing suit. Almost anything, from a visit to the studio of the Alabama football team to an unnamed French scientist's alleged declaration that American girls were too athletic.

and hear and feel the whole south as it really lives today. He talked with governors and professors, with labor leaders and industrialists, with hitch hikers and tenant farmers, with hillbillies and Delta planters, poets, gardeners, and everywhere the Negro. When he came back to Raleigh at last, Mr. Daniels felt that he'd come pretty close to discovering the south.

It would be futile, of course, to summarize his conclusions here, except for one or two major theses. At long last he observes, the south is waking, scratching at new desires. It is thinking about freeing itself from the economic slavery it has known since the Civil War. The tariff and freight rates have contributed largely to this slavery. There have been other factors, too, such as the "single-slavery" to cotton.

Just how the south will emerge, Mr. Daniels is not certain, of course. Perhaps through a diverse industrial and agricultural development. But of one thing he is sure—it must emerge.

To read Mr. Daniels' book is to know why.—P.G.F.

"You were there last summer, Clarice. Do you think I'm taking enough swims for Sunday school?"

was sufficient excuse to get Ann Sheridan into a bathing suit.

This extra-contrived activity was due to her good nature. Many a less capable actress, asked to pose for a little "gag art" with a giant baby panda, or with a senile investigator who never had seen a motion picture, went into an indignant and pouty refusal. Miss Sheridan, in her luscious voice and with a feigned air of condescension always said, "Well, all right, if you so-and-sos really need it."

Now it is an accepted principle in Hollywood that no actress worthy of the name will pose for stunt pictures. There is a line, drawn approximately at the salary level of $500 a week, at which stunt pictures cease to be welcome publicity and become outrageous indignities.

So it is not surprising that the studio misinterpreted the actress' graciousness as lack of confidence. She wasn't taken seriously. There also was the matter of tests. Miss Sheridan detests tests, and a string of bad ones has left her in terror of them.

She said, "I've been tested for everything but the Red Shadow in 'The Desert Song.' I've been tested for nearly every big picture on the lot—and I generally wind up in a who-dunnit."

"It's funny, but something always seems to go wrong, and I get to shaking like mad and believing like an infant from the corn belt who has won a Most Healthy Fetus contest and a Trip to Hollywood. In five years—too at Paramount and three at Warners—I've been in dozens of pictures, scores of pictures, and have taken hundreds of tests. But only four of the tests won roles. One of the stock sayings around the lot, when somebody is fired or walks out, is 'Okay—we can get Ann Sheridan to do it.'"

Credit for the recognition of Miss Sheridan as an umph-girl should go to Universal, because it chose her, from tests, for the second lead in "Letter of Introduction"—the Charles C. Crichton, Adolphe Menjou and Andrea Leeds flicker.

Right after that, her home studio gave her the leading woman's role in the Cagney film, "Angels With Dirty Faces."

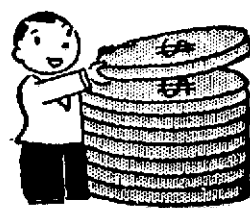

So Miss Sheridan will be noticed now, in top-notch films, and the chances are that she's got right along without fighting.

"I like people and I hate to argue," she said. "I'm well paid, and have a nice husband named Ed Norris, and a nice home, and I like to work in pictures even if they're westerns."

"Still, I wonder if I'd have got along faster if I had gone temperamental and yelled for better parts."

The bluebells rang their chime to him to stay,

Walking Toward the Altar

This campaign marks the end of a beautiful political friendship. Two years ago, Crump supported Browning, adding his 60,000 votes to Browning's tremendous majority over Burgin Dossert.

But only a few months after election Browning broke with Crump. Nobody knows just why. Two special sessions of the legislature have been largely devoted to curbing Crump's political power. His appointees have been fired. A "county unit" act was passed which cut the Shelby vote, and which the state supreme court threw out. Browning "purged" the state election rolls, and sent state police to revise the election lists.

Crump says he will win anyway in what one of his aides called a "notoriously honest" election. Possibly the piles of watermelons beside the polling-places (one vote, one watermelon) and the prepping drinks of red-eye may be missing this year, but it is no secret that in the past voters, especially the negro voters, have been marshaled to the polls in drives and voted as many times as seemed necessary.

Browning presents a sharp contrast to the soft-spoken and aristocratic Crump. A boy from a hillside farm near Atwood, West Tennessee, Browning had no political experience until after his outstanding military service in France raised him to the rank of captain.

Then, beginning in 1922, he served six terms in congress. He withdrew to run unsuccessfully for the Senate in 1934.

Browning has had a turbulent administration as governor, and at 48, powerfully-built and weighing more than 200, he little resembles the slim captain who came back from France in 1919.

schools and is against the creating of any more taxes on lands or the necessities of life.

In regard to old age assistance he said: "Before we do anything in regard to old age pensions we must first hear the people on the Rolenberry act in the general election this fall. Then we should go out and find all the old people and put them all on the same basis before increasing the pension of any. After doing this we can increase their assistance. In regard to liquor question, I'm dry! Look at my past life."

"The ambition to represent the people of my county was born in my breast 20 years ago in the middle of my father's cotton patch. . . . That ambition has stayed with me all these years. . . . I am asking that you give a young man a chance. Or will you say that is an old man's world and stop your school teachers from giving words of encouragement to your children."

"I have gone as far up the ladder as I can by these hands. I am asking now for your help. You can give me a push on up the ladder and if you will leave the name of Royce Weisenberger on the ballot August 9 I'll thank you."

A. P. Deloney, Talbot Field, Jr., and Hugh Clark followed Weisenberger in presenting their claims for one of the two representative positions.

Lester Booker, for state land commissioner, was again presented by his brother, Joe, who made an announcement of the qualifications of his brother. At the same time he hit the family of Otis Page, present commissioner.

Gene Autry in one of his latest pictures "The Singing Cowboy," Gary Cooper in "The Adventures of Marco Polo," "Troopship," a sensational Unit Artists release, Joan Fontaine in "The Blonde Cheat." There will be another announcement of outstanding hits within the very near future.

purely an intra-party fight, as all Republicans have withdrawn.

Both Sides Charged With Shakedown

Whichever side wins there is likely to be an official contest of the results in the U. S. Senate, whose committee investigating campaign expenses and practices has charged that Browning has been shaking down state employees and Crump federal employees with equal zeal and lack of scruple.

It is even rumored here that if Browning carries the state outside Memphis, and is noised out by a 70,000 majority piled up by the Crump workers in the city, he will perhaps ask the State Central Committee to throw out the Shelby county (Memphis) vote and declare him the nominee. If he should lose even in the state committee, he may run as an independent in November.

The Tennessee situation has other similarities to the one which brought Huey Long to power in Louisiana. Not only is Browning stumping the state in the same swanky trailer once used by the Kingfish, but he is launching the same kind of an attack on the iniquities of the big city (Memphis) which Long used so effectively among the bayon-billies in attacking New Orleans opponents. Browning has sent investigators to Memphis to expose liquor and vice conditions, and has paraded in his campaign the photographs they made of such conditions.

When Ben W. Kohn, a lawyer and Browning supporter, was publicly blackjacked in the streets of Memphis, no adequate action was taken against the known assassin. Browning created a special "secret service" police force for duty in Shelby county only. Two other Browning supporters were similarly slugged later on.

for "hogging" the land office. He urged his listeners to "get on the Booker band wagon and ride the Otis Page out of the state house and back to Missouri from whence they came." Young Booker received much applause.

Steve Carrigan, Hope attorney, and introduced as one of the foremost orators of the state, was granted the floor for a few minutes in behalf of R. A. (Bob) Cook, candidate for governor. After telling the crowd about the qualifications of Judge Cook and hitting the Bailey administration, Mr. Carrigan left the platform amid much cheering and hand-clapping.

To the People of Arkansas

During this campaign I have reported to you on the condition of your State Government after 19 months of my administration. I believe you agree with me that its condition is good. The machinery of government is functioning smoothly and efficiently; every department and institution is on a cash basis; their services have been expanded and improved at no extra cost to you, and we are paying our debts. Arkansas is going forward, not backward.

At the same time, I have been explicit with you regarding my policies and philosophy of government. I believe that the function of government is service, efficiently and economically rendered. I do not believe in the hoarding of tax money paid into the treasury for specific purposes approved by the people or their representatives. I could have built up a huge surplus during my first term, if I had refused to spend your money for the purposes for which you contributed it. I could not do that. I have tried to give you your money's worth in service and I propose to continue that policy.

I have outlined my plans for the future. They include continuation of the program already begun, the refinancing of our highway indebtedness to release additional funds for road construction, and further reduction in burdensome and unnecessary taxes.

I believe these things justify my asking for the second term which Democratic tradition accords the public official who has served satisfactorily in his first term. Therefore I ask your endorsement of my administration and I solicit your vote in the Democratic primary on August 9th.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

PICTURING THE HOUSE

Careful "framing" with trees made this snapshot more pleasing.

ALMOST everyone who has a camera takes pictures of his home, but many of us neglect the few simple suggestions which would make our snapshots of "home sweet home" much more pleasing. Here they are:

First, keep the camera level, or vertical lines will be distorted. Stand back far enough to get the picture without tilting the camera. If necessary, shoot from across the street—perch yourself in a fork of a tree, or maybe a step-ladder will give you the proper elevation.

Second, pick a time when the sun lights the house at the proper angle. The sun rays should strike the house at a slant so that shadows are cast by such details as window frames and weatherboarding. These shadows outline all the brightly lighted projecting details, and they will appear clearly in the picture.

Third, try to "frame" the picture attractively with trees or overhanging branches. Such a natural "frame" for the house gives depth to the picture and adds pictorial charm.

A good fourth rule—use a color

Space didn't permit taking a complete view, but the doorway and roof angles alone made a charming shot.

Alter over the camera lens to give tone to the sky. Rich-toned sky is especially pleasing in pictures of white houses, and it improves the effect of any picture.

If you have no recent pictures of your home, take a few today, following these suggestions. Perhaps your house is so situated that you can't apply all the rules, but each, by itself, will help you produce pictures that more attractively present the place where you live.

John Van Guilder.

STORIES IN STAMPS

How a Nation Was Moved Westward

WHEN Americans spoke of the "west" just 150 years ago they meant the quarter-million square miles of wilderness that stretched between the Great Lakes, the Mississippi on the west, and the Ohio river on the south. Originally this vast virgin area was claimed by four states on the basis of grants from the King of England or treaties with the Indians. Virginia, Connecticut and Massachusetts, for example, claimed the right to extend westward as far as possible, conceivably to the Pacific, Connecticut clinging to the 6000 square miles of the "Western Reserve" until 1800. On July 13, 1787, a harassed Congress passed the Ordinance of 1787, for "governing the Territory northwest of Ohio." It guaranteed religious freedom, right of trial by jury, public schools, and freedom from slavery. In December of that year Gen. Rufus Putnam started an expedition overland from Massachusetts, through Pennsylvania, down the Ohio to Fort Harmon. Here was established the outpost and town named for Marie Antoinette, Marietta. In a year 20,000 came to the new country. Today 25,000,000 live in this area and the nation has gone still farther westward.

Home Run Mark in Danger

CINCINNATI—Babe Ruth is not so completely wrapped up in the magnitude of his major league home run record of 60 as to argue that it is shatterproof.

"It's possible to break it," concedes the famous coach of the Brooklyn Dodgers. "The left field wall in Detroit, where Hank Greenberg performs, is a pretty easy target. Didn't Jimmy Fox, now favored by a kindly left field wall in Boston, come pretty near cracking it with 59?"

"Nowadays pitchers pitch to sluggers. In 1927, when I hit 60 I seldom had more than two or three chances a day. They were always throwing bad ones at me. Now, as a general thing, the only player who gets an intentional pass is the catcher, so they can get at the pitcher."

Barney has presented the promising Polish lad with the headgear, training gloves, skipping rope and other equipment he used to win the lightweight and welterweight titles.

Softball Association Debt Slashed From $513.24 to $122.71

Committee Gives Financial Report

Outstanding Debts Expected to Be Paid by September 1

The finance committee of the Hope Softball Association Tuesday submitted a financial statement for publication which showed that capital investment and operating expense had been reduced from $513.24 to $122.71.

The finance committee is composed of Kelly Bryant, chairman and league treasurer, A. E. Stonequist and Lyman Armstrong.

Their report shows:

Capital Investment
City Government	$223.62
Cost of Reflectors	112.00
Cost of light bulbs	61.88
Freight cost	8.91
Replacement bulbs	24.12
Cox-Cassidy (cross-bars)	17.04
Light switch	2.25
Cost of paint	7.70
Total investment	$458.42
Operating Expense
Umpires to August 1	$ 41.00
Balls for exhibitions	10.82
Printing tickets	3.00
Total capital investment and operating expense	$513.24
Outstanding Debts
City government	$96.33
Southern Radio Supply	24.12
Duffie Hardware	2.55
Balance due umpires	7.50
Scott Store	2.25
Total	$132.75
Cash on hand	10.04
Total outstanding debts as of August 1	$122.71

The first admission charge under the lights at Fair Park was the night of July 7 which was a dedication night of the new softball park.

About 10 days later the new schedule for the last half was announced, calling for at least two league games each night which almost prohibited the playing of exhibition contests.

It became necessary then to charge for league games in order to provide funds for payment of umpires, replacement of bulbs, and to reduce the outstanding indebtedness against the Softball Association.

Before the lights were installed, the city government granted a loan to the association of $223.62, this amount represented the cost of poles, light wire, labor and installation of lights.

The finance committee estimated that outstanding obligations against the association would be wiped out by September 1.

Buster Brannon Is Named Head Basketball Mentor

PINE BLUFF, Ark.—Bryon (Buster) Brannon, former Pine Bluff High School and Texas Christian University football and basketball player, has been named head basketball coach at Rice Institute, Houston, Texas, according to a message received here by Ben Brannon, father of the athlete.

Brannon, 28, graduate of T. C. U. with the class of 1933, and recently coach at Odessa High School, will succeed Head Coach Jimmy Kitts, who asked to be relieved as basketball mentor to devote full time to football.

Brannon was coach at Doubtless (Texas) High School two years and at Van (Texas) High School three years before taking the position at Odessa last April 1. He was an All-Southwest conference basketball player at T. C. U. the last two of the three years he lettered under Francis Schmidt. He guarded on one T. C. U. conference championship team. He lettered three years as quarterback.

Lively Baseball Calls for Action

Much Strategy and Inside Play Vanishes With New Baseball

Second of a five-part series, "Changing Baseball."

By HARRY GRAYSON Sports Editor, NEA Service

Much baseball strategy passed with the inside technique that disappeared with the advent of the lively ball. Connie Mack laughs in relating what happened the first time Eddie Collins and Jack Barry of the old Athletics attempted to check Donie Bush and Ty Cobb with one of the cleverest defense plays ever designed.

Bush led off for Detroit... reached first frequently. The shortstop was fast, and with Cobb batting third, a run always was imminent when Bush got on base.

So Collins and Barry evolved this plan. When Cobb broke for second, Collins was to run in behind the pitcher in a direct line between second base and the catcher.

If Bush, on third, started home when the catcher threw, Collins would take the ball and from that short distance throw him out at the plate. However, if Bush remained on third, Collins would duck, and let the ball through to second where Barry would receive it and tag Cobb sliding into second.

Sure enough, Bush reached first and Cobb drove him to third with a hit. Collins and Barry knew what to expect and were not disappointed. On the first pitch, Cobb broke for second, but the crafty Bush, nothing that strange maneuver, did not move from third, and Collins, as per agreement, ducked and let the ball go through.

However, Barry had also been watching Bush instead of Collins, and the ball hit him full in the stomach, knocking him off the bag and nearly out. Whereupon Bush sprinted across the plate.

The point is that infielders design nothing of the kind today.

Players of Dead Ball Era Were More Resourceful

The jackrabbit pill has removed competition from the game. Baseball engagements are endurance contests more often than not. The players of yesterday were more inventive and resourceful.

Lena Blackburn, the former infielder now coaching the Athletics, doesn't attribute it all to the hopped-up sphere, either.

"Base-runners today are too busy fanning with umpires to catch signs, if any," he says. "Certainly, the percentage now is in batting runners around, but Cobb would run mighty well today, too. Why, he'd never stop running on some pitchers, young Bob Feller for example. Base-runners today do not study the mannerisms of pitchers. They don't know how and aren't interested in getting a lead."

"Base-runners of my day were always sliding back to the bags. Cobb lived in the dirt. Now so-called base-runner. Any infielder who blocked drove up their legs in doing it."

Cobb and the old boys believed that the base lines belonged to the base-runner. Any infielder who blocked them, did so at his own peril.

Blackburn asserts that he hasn't seen spikes sharpened in 20 years.

Whizzer White to Play Pro Football

Will Also Take Advantage of Rhodes Scholarship, Says Report

DENVER, Colo.—(AP)—Bryon (Whizzer) White, who toyed for months with the choice between playing professional football for $15,000 in one season or traveling to England and Oxford on a Rhodes scholarship, is going to do both.

Colorado University's All-America football star informed newspapermen Monday he would play this fall with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Once the football campaign is over, he will sail to England and enroll in Oxford in January. The 21-year-old White said he reached this decision only after "a certain group of English authorities" had assured him he could defer his entrance until mid-June.

Blond Bryon, stripped to shirt sleeves for rehearsal as master of ceremonies of a radio program Monday night, said it "wasn't a case of changing my mind."

"If it was still a choice between the scholarship and pro football, my decision would be the same as it was in June when I picked Oxford. But now that it's definite I can play football and still go to England—well, what would you do?" he asked.

White, who led the nation's grid scoremakers last season with 122 points said he has not yet signed a contract with Pittsburgh and would not sign until he goes east.

old-fashioned players of today who are not afraid to slide, show their spikes, and are difficult to tag.

Customers Get Action Instead of Science

The exciting squeeze play... with the runner on third going with the pitch and the batter bunting... disappeared with the coming of the lively pellet.

They hit and run today, but haphazardly. Doing this properly requires too much practice and skill. The batter must guess which player is going to cover second...

Cut-off plays are gone. The ball is hit so far that it doesn't pay a club to waste time perfecting them. Shortstops like Bush, Ray Chapman, and Swede Risberg used to go far back and to their right on the grass to get their meat hands on boppers hit past the third baseman, and throw the runner out at first. Shortstops such as Leo Durocher could do this today were the ball not so lively. A shortstop had to have a great arm when the ball was made in such a way that he could field it.

Shortstops and other infielders before the jackrabbit sphere handled many more chances than those of today.

Big Ed Walsh is right. Infield play has been greatly minimized. The customers get action instead of science.

Many prefer it, but the dyed-in-the-wool fan would like to see the game given back to the ball player.

NEXT: Pitching then and now.

"Santa Claus" Branch Rickey Wins Pennants for Other Ball Teams

Cardinal Castoffs Have Done Much to Help Other Major League Teams Win Flags the Past Four or Five Years

By DILLON GRAHAM AP Feature Service Writer

"SANTA CLAUS" Branch Rickey is up to the old trick of winning National League pennants for other teams.

Whether the Giants, Cubs, Pirates or Reds, the hunting, the triumphant manager should immediately send down and telegraph his thanks to Rickey and Sam Brandon.

Often, an impeccable source in the sportsworld exists a "Praise Rickey" club. Its members meet and counsel Branch in their prayers for the second Wednesday night of each month.

McKeehan, the Travesty and the other are leading lights. In the club's first official maneuver, the manager of the Cubs is to file application for Cholly Grimm's membership.

Other charter members, so I'm told, are Bill Terry, Casey Stengel, Jimmy Wilson and Burleigh Grimes.

Frankie Frisch is an associate member, on the grounds that Branch removed his chief headache, Dizz Dean.

He'd Worry Dave Harum. It is unlikely that any of these members would come out in the open and point-blank call Branch a philanthropist. On the contrary, he has the reputation of being a pretty slick number.

A shrewd horse-trader who got his schooling in the mule marts of Missouri. But despite his reputation as a man who looks an auction horse in the mouth and carefully examines his fetlocks, Branch has sanctioned some deals that would make David Harum turn over in his grave.

The base-line jockeys have been kidding for weeks about the Dizz Dean barter Branch made with Phil Wrigley. Maybe Branch did pull a fast fiasco on that one but if his luck as a bum trader holds out Jerome Hanna may yet pitch the Cubs into the World Series.

Joe Marty, from the Cards' Sacramento farm.

(B) Pirates get Pitcher Bob Klinger from Sacramento farm and Outfielder John Rizzo from Cards' Columbus chain link.

(C) Reds have Pitcher Paul Deringer, infielders Lew Riggs and Bill Myers, and Outfielder Ival Goodman. (All formerly were Cardinal hands.)

(D) Leo Durocher, obtained last year, stars at shortstop for Brooklyn. Outfielders Gene Moore and John Cooney of Boston and Herschel Ray Martin of Philadelphia are castoffs from the Cardinal gang. Mancuso is Terry's relief catcher and Whitehead, out since an appendectomy in the spring, may return in time to push the Giants' nose out front.

If you hadn't noticed, the Cardinals were cozily nestling down in seventh place as this was written, and perhaps Rickey would do well to send the sheriff out after those guys who got away from his chain gang.

Many Democrats to Oppose Third Term

Presidential Possibilities Discussed by AP Writer

By PRESTON GROVER
WASHINGTON.—At least one group of politicians would not like to see President Roosevelt run for a third term. They are the men with their own eyes on 1940.

For the President to run for a third term would break the hearts of more ambitious political aspirants than could be mended with all the patronage in America.

Right now the people who want to be the Democratic nominee in 1940 extend from McNutt in Manila to Barkley in Paducah, with branch lines running excitedly in all directions to gather in the others.

And what might happen to them if President Roosevelt continued in office until 1944?

Take Mr. McNutt as an example. He is in his forties at present and would age some by 1944. But Mr. McNutt and his friends have been pointing him toward 1940 with such persistence that it would be hard to delay the climax of his boom until 1944. Besides, he might have to come to the United States to hunt a new job to keep himself in the limelight. It takes an awful lot of limelight to reach Manila.

As Good As New
The jobs open to an aspiring presidential candidate are limited. Mr. McNutt might spell off the time with a term as Indiana governor, but he already has been governor. He has one advantage over many another candidate, that he really is young enough to be available six years hence. If the President chose to put him in cold storage by appointing him to a cabinet post, he could be taken out in 1944 almost as good as new, and probably still smiling.

The same might be true of Senator Clark of Missouri, who also is young enough to wait. In fact, six years of additional age might not hurt more than one or two of the present possibilities.

They include Senator Barkley of Kentucky and Governor Happy Chandler of the same state, Senator Byrd of Virginia, Governor Earle of Pennsylvania, Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming, Secretary Wallace of Agriculture, Mayor LaGuardia of New York, Secretary Ickes of the Interior, Administrator Harry Hopkins of WPA, Vice President Garner, Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, whose state organization already is torching for him, Robert Jackson, solicitor general, and perhaps some more senators and more cabinet members and more governors.

Enter the Dark Horse
Numerous age and political age are marked off on different calendars. Years of languishing in wait for 1944 could do any number of things. Foremost possibility is that within that time the lightning might strike some newcomer unknown today.

It would be worse still for the hopes of these Democratic lads if the days of the New Deal should be numbered by 1944.

Moreover, dozens of congressional independents who have no thought of the presidency are hankering for a President a trifle less popular. Rolling along with Roosevelt is great if a congressman is 100 per cent with him, but far less than fun if he is not.

One certainly, demonstrated anew by his transcontinental tour, is that the President has masses of support. Many

Where 'Heaven' Comes to Roosevelt

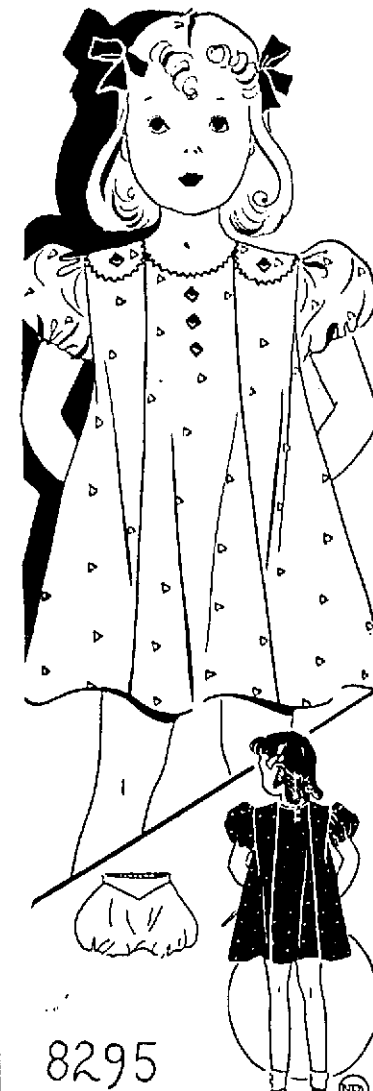

Marking the Hudson waterfront directly across the river from President Roosevelt's Krum Elbow estate, this boathouse is already being renovated by followers of Father Divine who have bought most of the 1000-acre estate of Howland Spencer to establish a "heaven" in the form of a farm community. Spencer, who also called his estate Krum Elbow, referred to Father Divine's economics as "more sound than Roosevelt's" as the followers of the Negro cult leader paid off his mortgages and took over as "next-door neighbors" of the President.

observers here, however, are convinced that if Mr. Roosevelt doesn't like the way the New Deal is working in 1940 he will be ready to captain it until 1944.
